HEAVY LOSSES TO JAPANESE ARE REPORTED

Ferocious Assaults Made on Port Arthur.

Whole Russian Front Engaged—Quiet at Shanghai Today—Progress of the War.

Chefoo, Aug 26.—Advices received here today state that in the fighting which is proceeding between the Russians and Japanese forces at Liao Yang, the whole Russian front from the Tai Tse river southwards is engaged.

Quiet Today at Shanghai.

Washington, Aug., 26.—Admiral Stirling has cabled the state department from Shanghai that everything is quiet and that it is supposed that the incident regarding the Russian ships is closed.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 26.—The latest from the front is summed up in a dispatch from Chefoo, showing that the Japanese in the assaults on Port Arthur Aug. 21 and 22 were again repulsed with heavy losses. Despite the assertion made in Tokyo that all the attacks so far on the fortress have been merely preliminary to a grand infantry assault, the feeling grows here that the ferocity of the repeated attacks and the defeats must be gradually dissipating the energy of the besiegers, and that the Japanese may find after all that "they have broken their teeth on the stone of Port Arthur."

The czar received from Viceroy Alexieff the following report of the commander of the cruiser Novik, which was sunk at Korsakovsk, island of Sakhalien, after a fight with the Japanese protected cruisers Chitose and Tsushima: "On Aug. 20 the Novik reached Korsakovsk. At 4 o'clock on the same day I sighted an enemy's cruiser of the Mitaka type and put to sea to engage her. After 45 minutes' fighting the Novik had three holes below her water line and two above, and the steering geer was damaged. The Japanese cruiser ceased fighting and began telegraphing. By the end of the engagement only six of our boilers were in good order, and this fact, added to the damage to our steering gear, compelled me to return to Korsakovsk to examine our condition. In doing this I intended to put to sea again at night, but finding it impossible to repair the rudder, and in view of the approach of several of the enemy's vessels, I decided to sink the cruiser in shallow water. The officers and stores were conveyed on shore. On Aug. 21 a cruiser of the Suma type bombarded that part of the cruiser showing above the water. My casualties on the 10th were two sailors killed and a doctor wounded, and on the 20th two sailors killed and 15 slightly wounded."

Rear Admiral Ouktomsky sends from Port Arthur an account of the sorties of the Port Arthur squadron on Aug. 10 and the engagement with the Japanese ships. He says: "As my vessel lost many in killed or wounded, and as the armament, hull and electric apparatus were seriously damaged, I decided to return to Port Arthur. The ironclads Retvizan, Pobieda, Holtava, Sevastopol and Czarevitch accompanied me, the Czarevitch being the last in line. We went at an average speed, but owing to the darkness and to repeated torpedo attacks, which obliged us from time to time to change our course, our vessels dispersed and at day the Retvizan, Sevastopol, Peresviet, Pobieda, Poltava and Pallada, with three torpedo boats, were at Port Arthur. Our casualties were two officers and 39 men killed and 21 officers and 286 men wounded, 50 of them severely."

STRUCK MINES.

Two Russian Destroyers Destroyed at Port Arthur.

Tokyo, Aug. 26.—Five steamers and three torpedo-boat destroyers emerged from Port Arthur Wednesday morning and began the work of clearing away floating mines. At 6:20 in the evening a two-funneled torpedo-boat destroyer struck a mine two miles off Liaoti promontory and sunk immediately. Five minutes later a second destroyer with four funnels ran against another floating mine, which exploded. This second vessel was at once surrounded by other Russian vessels and towed into Port Arthur, the entire flotilla accompanying her. These occurrences were seen from various Japanese watch towers. The Japanese cruiser Hashidate also witnessed the explosions. The action of the Russians in attempting to clear the channel of mines indicates the intention of the fleet again to sally from Port Arthur.

Forts at Port Arthur.

Chefoo, Aug. 26. — Golden Hill, White Marble mountain and Liaoti mountain, according to Chinese advices, are now the only main forts securely held by the Russians at Port Arthur. Others are occupied by them, but they are subjected to an artillery fire which renders their tenure uncertain. Fort No. 5, which has frequently been reported taken by the Japanese and retaken by the Russians, is again declared to be in the hands of the Japanese.

Roads Still Bad.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 26. — Lieutenant General Sakharoff, commander of the eastern army, telegraphs that the rains have ended and that fine weather has just set in, but that the roads are still impracticable. The excessive heat of midday has caused a recurrence of dysentery. Skirmishing is frequent, the general says, and there have been outpost encounters south of Anshanshan and a cavalry engagement southeast of Liandjansian.

Five Thousand Wounded.

Chefoo, Aug. 26.—A junk which left Port Arthur Aug. 22 reports that the Russian wounded at that date numbered 5,000 and that the Japanese occupied the heights near Chaochanko. It is further reported that boys are fighting in the Russian ranks now.

LIGHTNING

Struck Barn on Hoggin Farm and Killed Three Valuable Trotting Horses—Loss, $7,000.

Lexington, Ky, Aug. 26.—Lightning struck a barn on the Haggin farm and killed three valuable trotting horses. The stallion Hardwick, owned by N. W. Huberger of New Haven, Conn.; a three-year-old Electric Bell colt owned by J. W. Collier of Memphis, Tenn., and a yearling Abdell colt owned by J. W. Druien of Bardstown, Ky., were killed. The loss is estimated at $7,000.

GOVERNOR J. K. VARDAMAN OF MISSISSIPPI.

Governor Vardaman, who was a prominent figure at the time of the reading of Judge Parker's famous telegram in the Democratic national convention, has been brought into the limelight still further by the refusal of the postoffice department to permit a Mississippi postoffice to be named for him, which act has occasioned considerable controversy. Governor Vardaman was elected on the issue of white domination, though he insists that he is a sincere friend of the negro. He saved two negroes from lynching at some personal risk. He was a major in the Spanish-American war.

CZAR ORDERS THE VOLUNTEER FLEET TO QUIT

British Warships to Carry the Message

Vessels of the Cape Squadron Are Commissioned to Locate the Russian Raiders.

London, Aug. 26.—It was announced by Premier Balfour that the British government had ordered two cruisers from the squadron at the Cape of Good Hope without delay to locate the Russian volunteer fleet steamers Smolensk and St. Petersburg and to convey to them the orders of the Russian government that they must not further interfere with neutral shipping. The premier stated that this action was taken at the request of the Russian government. This statement was made when the premier recived a large deputation of the London chamber of commerce. The deputation was appointed at a meeting held by the China and East India section of the chamber, which was attended by representative ship owners and others interested in trade in the far east. The deputation alleged that Russia had shown differential treatment in the seizure of neutral shipping, to the detriment of Great Britain. To substantiate this claim several cases were cited.

Mr. Balfour carefully reviewed the cases of alleged differential treatment. He said there was no evidence as yet that fair treatment would not be meted out to all, and that in his opinion the mooted cases hardly bore out the serious contention of discrimination against British shipping, but should it, against his own sincere belief, appear that there really had been discrimination, the government would take every step to end such a disastrous state of things which he refused even to contemplate. The deputation must remember that belligerents had rights as well as neutrals, and the premier added: "We ourselves may have to appeal to the law of nations to protect our rights as belligerents, and in the interests of our own self-preservation we may be obliged to ignore the interests of neutral shippers engaged in the risky though legitimate operation of carrying contraband of war."

Warships Out of Commission.

Shanghai, Aug. 26. — The Russian cruiser Askold and the torpedo-boat destroyer Grozovoi have gone out of commission, but the work of repairing them is being continued. There was no formal ceremony when the vessels went out of commission. A simple announcement was made by the commanders of the two warships that the vessels would remain in port until the war is over. The work of dismantling them will begin at once. The Askold has been authorized to remain in dock until Sept. 11 in order to complete her repairs.

Winter Campaign Probable.

London, Aug. 26.—According to the correspondent of the Daily Chronicle with General Kuroki's army the Japanese are not likely to retire into winter quarters. Rather than to thus give the Russians a breathing space they will prosecute a vigorous winter campaign. The correspondent says that the Japanese are accumulating immense stores, ammunition and guns at Haicheng.

British Boat Stopped.

London, Aug. 26.—News has reached England that the Russian auxiliary cruiser Ural stopped and examined the British collier Pencalenick on Aug. 12. The Pencalenick was bound from Cardiff from Malta with coal for the British navy.

Baltic Fleet Moves.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 26. — It is announced that the Baltic fleet, with the exception of the new battleship Orel, left Cronstadt on a 10 days' cruise.

SENATORSHIP

Involved In the Contest For the Gubernatorial Nomination In State of Utah.

Salt Lake City, Aug. 26. — After a bitter fight John C. Cutler of Salt Lake City was nominated for governor by the Republican state convention on the second ballot. The fight for the governorship was a three-cornered one between Governor H. M. V. Wells, now serving his second term in that office; J. H. Hammond, present secretary of state, and John Cutler, a merchant of Salt Lake City. Mr. Hammond withdrew after the first ballot. The second ballot stood: Cutler, 239; Wells, 221. Charges that church influence was being used in behalf of Mr. Cutler were freely made by the adherents of Governor Wells and Mr. Hammond. Indirectly the fight for the United States senatorship in the Utah legislature next winter was brought into the contest, Senator Smoot, who is one of the twelve apostles of the Mormon church, being an open and active supporter of Mr. Cutler, while Governor Wells was helped in his campaign by Senator Kearns.

FIRES

Seattle, Wash., Aug 26.—Fires sweeping over Whatcom county have caused a loss of more than $200,000. The property destroyed includes all the buiings at the Whistler mine and the stamp mill at the Goat mine. Much valuable timber has also been consumed. The forest fires are still raging today.

PROMINENT MAN IS MURDERED BY A MISTAKE

Tragedy Occurred Today at Covington, Ky.

Brother of Internal Revenue Collector Lieberth Is Jailed For J. C. Landsdowne's Murder.

Covington, Ky., Aug. 26.—Almost within the shadow of his mother's home, John C. Landsdowne, one of the most prominent young men in Covington, was stabbed to the heart early this morning and died in the hallway of his home, where he has staggered in his agony. Landsdowne's dying words implicated John Lieberth, brother of Internal Revenue Collector Lieberth, and he was arrested today and charged with the murder. Landsdowne's brother had preferred charges against Collector Lieberth and as the dead man and his brother resembled each other closely, it is thought that a mistake was made when the murder was committed. Lieberth, who is in jail, refused to make a statement today.

A Prominent Chinaman Was Held at Buffalo.

Indignant Merchant Says He Will Lay the Matter Before the State Department.

Buffalo, N. Y. Aug. 26—Because he had left his passports and credentials behind him when he left St Louis for New York via Canada, Yu Jitmin, one of China's leading merchants and a commissioner sent by the emperor of China to represent his country at the St. Louis exposition, was detained for several hours yesterday in the immigrant station by United States government officials at Black Rock. The Chinaman is very indignant and says he will lay the matter before the state department at Washington. Immigration Inspector Frank S. Pierece today stated that the Chinaman had nothing to show that his story was true and he had to detain him until he verified it.

Jealousy the Cause.

New York, Aug. 26.—William Harmon, employed as a driver for an ice company, shot and killed a young woman, Eileen Wood, in a rooming house in Adams street, Brooklyn, and then shot himself in the breast. Instantly after shooting himself he leaped through a second-story window to the street, fracturing his skull. He will die. Jealousy was the reason for the crimes.

Six Struck by Lightning.

Knox, Ind., Aug 26. — Orin Emich and Omer Poor were killed and Arthur Connor, William White, John Schultz and Clinton Hatter were seriously injured by a bolt of lightning which struck a shed under which a dozen farmers had sought refuge from a storm while working in a wheat field. The rest were shocked by the stroke.

ED. FAY

La Crosse, Wis., Aug. 26.—Eddie Fay, leader of the most daring postoffice robberies in the country, and who was captured in connection with the robbery of the Superior postoffice and was waiting trial in the United States court, escaped from Janesville jail early this morning. Accomplices sawed into the jail from the outside and set Fay free. Postoffice Inspector Fraser will direct a posse in an attempt to capture Fay.

JEF AND MUNROE ARE READY FOR BOUT TONIGHT

Statement Issued by the Principals

In Which Each Expresses Confidence in the Result—Betting Stimulated—Odds the Same.

San Francisco, Aug. 25.—Jeffries and Munroe are scheduled to enter the ring at 9 o'clock, sharp, tonight (11 o'clock Newark time) and within an hour and a half the battle will be ended. The sale of seats was very heavy yesterday though the advance sale does not augur a record-breaking house.

San Francisco, Aug. 26. — Tonight James J Jeffries and Jack Munroe, the husky Butte miner, will meet in the arena in a contest for the heavyweight championship of the world. Both men are confident, are in perfect condition and ready for the fray. The betting loosened up somewhat during the day. A noticeable feature was the increase of the Munroe money. The odds remained in the neighborhood of 100 to 35. There was considerable wagering on the number of rounds. The betting that Jeffries would win inside of 10 rounds was at even money. As to the outcome Munroe said: "I'm glad the hard work is over. I am in as good shape as it is possible for me to be. I am confident of winning, notwithstanding the odds and the way the public looks at it."

Jeffries made the following statement: "No plays for the grandstand this time. I will be satisfied with a decision as well as with a knockout. It is all poppycock to say that this other fellow is a pudding. He is big and strong, and no one can tell what will happen when he gets into the ring. I expect to win. I feel that it is in me, but I am not going to take any chances. I don't want to win on a dangerous punch if I can win easier on a decision. While I shall fight the best that is in me, it will be cautiously. People who are betting on the number of rounds will get no consideration from me. I don't care how many rounds it takes as long as I win. I shall go into the ring in the best possible condition and with the intention of doing my best. The interpretation of the rules suits me perfectly. Hitting in the breakaways is fair to both men and gives no one any advantage. I am emphatic in my decision that I will not start if Munroe tries to use anything but soft bandages on his hands."

MARLBOROUGH

May Be Appointed Governor General of Canada—The Report Is Revived at Ottawa.

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 26.—The report is revived here that the Duke of Marlborough may be appointed governor general of Canada. When first mentioned some months ago the report was received with incredulity, but since then it is said developments have occurred which render the appointment more probable. One of them is that the duke has been training at the colonial office. There is also the fact that he stands in high favor with the present administration.

Jamestown, N. Y., Aug 26.—A tornado swept through Chautauqua county, killing four persons, injuring several and destroying property valued at several thousand dollars.

SECY. TAFT

Labors In Defense of the President In the Opening Campaign Speech In Vermont Today.

Montpelier, Vt., Aug. 26.—Heavy artillery fire in the Republican national campaign was opened here today in a carefully prepared speech by Hon. Wm. H. Taft, secretary of war, in which he devoted considerable time to answering the various criticisms of President Roosevelt's personality and conduct. "It has been charged," he said, "that the President was a strong-headed tyrant, obstinate in his pride, and opinion, and that he failed to listen to argument. On this point I am in position to know whereof I speak," declared the secretary. "I all my experience, I have met a man in authority who has less pride of opinion in judgments that he has formed than has Theodore Roosevelt. I have never met a man who is so amenable to reason, so anxious to reach just conclusion, so willing to sacrifice a previously formed opinion as the President of the United States."

Senator Hoar's Condition.

Worcester, Mass., Au. 26.—George R. Hoar gave out the following this morning.

"Senator Hoar had a quiet night. He is comfortable this morning and took nourishment. He has yet to show any gain in strength."

Children Drowned.

Cleburne, Tex., Aug. 26.—Four children were drowned by the capsizing of a boat in the Brazos river near Acton, Hood county. The dead: John Franklin, 9; Kitty Franklin, 10; Joe Franklin, 8, B F Goodman, 12. There were six boys and girls, all told, in the boat at the time of the disaster. In going down stream one of the boat's oars struck a snag and the vessel immediately turned over. Two boys, names unknown, swam ashore. The bodies of the victims were recovered.

Marble Cutters Out.

New York, Aug 26.—Sixteen hundred marble cutters are on strike. The strike, it is said, is in sympathy with the strike in the building trades in this city. The marble cutters were not affected by the general lockout order of the employers' association, although affiliated with the Building Trades Alliance, which is conducting the building strike.

NEW TRIAL

Is Given Wiltrox, Who Was Convicted Largely Through Testimony of His Own Son.

Chicago, Aug. 26. — John Wiltrax, convicted largely through the testimony of his own son of murdering little Paul Pazkowski, has been granted a new trial. The case interested Peter Van Vlissingen, a wealthy Chicago business man, who believed the police had terrorized Wiltrax's son into testifying against Wiltrax. The boy testified that he had seen his father kill Paul Pazkowski, but after Mr Van Vlissingen had become interested in the case the Wiltrax boy repudiated this testimony.

SEXTON DIES AS RESULT OF THE LYNCHING

Was One of the Mob That Burned a Negro.

In the Melee He Was Fatally Shot in the Abdomen and Died Today In Georgia.

Cedartown, Ga., Aug. 26.—John Sexton is the first white man to lose his life through the lynching of a Georgia negro. He died today from a wound received last Monday in a general shooting which marked the lynching of Jim Cloves, a negro, who criminally assaulted 13-year-old Levia Reeves. Sexton was one of the mob which hanged, shot and burned the negro. In the melee he was fatally shot in the abdomen.

The Statesboro Affair.

Savannah, Ga., Aug. 26.—The court of inquiry into the Statesboro lynching was convened at 10 o'clock this morning. Col. W. L. Grayson of the First regiment of Georgia, was the first witness. He said that Capt. R. H. Hitch had been selected to command because he was a cool and efficient officer. On the second call, a full regiment was sent, he said, but when he arrived all was over. Capt. Hitch, the next witness, said that the reason why the rifles were not loaded was that they could be loaded quickly and he also feared that the soldiers being inexperienced, might shoot prematurely.

Russo-German Treaty.

London, Aug. 26.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Daily Telegraph says he learns that the recently concluded Russo-German commercial treaty contains secret clauses of a political nature enabling Russia to draft all her troops in the western provinces to the seat of war, thus denuding the frontiers, in implicit reliance upon Emperor William's assurances of friendship. The correspondent says also that large tariff concessions have been made to Russia at Emperor William's suggestion, the nature of which when published will grievously disappoint the German agrarians.

Disastrous Cloudburst.

Reno, Nev., Aug. 26. — Cloudbursts and washouts in Tonapah and along the lines of the Tonapah and Colorado railroads are the most disastrous in the history of these districts. People at Tonapah and Goldfields are on the verge of starvation. They are being temporarily relieved by the rushing in of supplies via Croon Springs, Silver Peak and Candaleria by wagon trains. But this is only temporarily, as over 5,000 people must be fed in the different camps and extraordinary measures must be taken for their relief. Food supplies are practically exhausted.

Filipino Destroys Himself.

St Louis, Aug. 26—Cristobal Salvator, a corporal in the Philippine constabulary, encamped at the world's fair, committed suicide by shooting. He was found in his tent with a Winchester rifle lying near him. He left a letter stating that ill health caused him to take his life.

IN THE FIELD OF SPORT

ALL JEFFRIES

THAT'S THE WAY IT LOOKS TO NEWARK SPORTSMEN.

There Seems to Be Very Little Enthusiasm Here Over Tonight's Boxing Event.

There seems to be very little enthusiasm in Newark anent the battle tonight between Jeffries and Monroe, to decide the heavyweight championship. In fact this condition prevails all over the country and one does not have to look far for a reason. The bout appears too much one sided to be interesting. In fact in well posted sporting circles it is generally believed that the postponement was not so much to give the champion's knee a chance to mend, as to give the promoters a chance to better advertise the fight and give it the appearance of a contest by the effect that rumors of Jeffries' poor condition might have. In Jeffries fights heretofore he has been up against men of proven fistic ability, who either fought very much the way he did, or far outclassed him in some one branch, as Corbett did in boxing. With Monroe it is different.

The miner has no claims to be considered even in Jeffries' class as a pugilist along any line, and when he gets in the ring with the big boilermaker tonight, this assertion will be proven.

So confident are local sports of the outcome that not a resort in Newark that has heretofore received ticker reports by rounds, has made arrangements to get tonight's battle. There is absolutely no betting on the result, a few small wagers having been put up on the number of rounds it will last. A number of men who follow the fistic game closely expressed opinions this morning as follows:

S. McCort—"There is nothing to it but Jeffries. He will win easily. I have not made a bet, but have offered good odds on the boilermaker with no takers."

Charley Slane—"I wish I could think Munroe would win, and if I were sure of it I would make a barrel of money. But it's all Jeffries."

Jimmy Fitzgerald—"I can't figure Munroe in at any stage. Jeffries will win easily."

Charley Bingmann—"The talk about Jeffries' knee handicapping him in tonight's battle is all for effect. You will find he is in elegant shape, will not lose his head, and wil win easily."

Charley Henry, Barney Byrnes. Will Driscoll, Frank Bader and many others expressed similar opinions.

NEWARK HORSE

After Dropping Two Heats Took the Third and May Win Unfinished Race at London.

London, O., Aug. 26.—Pinchem Wilkes, stone blind, dropped in yesterday for a little easy money that the Madison county fair folks had hung up for free-for-all pacers.

He pulled down the cash and gave some 10,000 people a splendid exhibition on a half-mile track that cannot be rated fast.

Milton S, the pride of Urbana, was the one horse that old Pinchem had to beat. The trick was easily turned.

Just as soon as it was finished it began to rain and poured for two hours.

This advent of so much dampness left the 2:17 pace unfinished as Oscar from Newark, took a tab of 2:14 1-4 in cutting Colonel Coit out of the third heat.

This race and the 2:30 trot which was not touched at all will be on Friday in addition to the regular card. The summaries:

BIG HOTEL IN THE WOODS

Tavern Inside the World's Fair Grounds, Surrounded By a Forest, Offers a Luxurious and Restful Retreat.

COMPORT AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

The comfort for the visitor to an exposition was never the subject for so much intelligent thought and preparation as it has been at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition at St Louis.

One of the features that cannot fail to appeal to the visitor is the convenience and comfort afforded by The Inside Inn, a structure of 2,257 rooms, covering an area of 400 to 800 feet, wholly within the World's Fair grounds.

Probably no hotel ever built commands a view so diversified or grand From the wide verandas that surround the mammoth structure a wonderful panorama spreads before one. Many of the state buildings, with their giant and magnificent structures, present their most attractive facades. Some of the foreign buildings may be seen, and the forest of towers and turrets, domes and minarets, rising above the great exhibit palaces and seen through the forests of real trees that surround the hostelry, give token of the other glories that lie beyond

A leisurely walk of five minutes will land the visitor on the main terrace in front of Festival Hall, the center of the "main picture" of the exposition, the grandest spectacle ever produced by man. Another five minutes' walk and the visitor may find himself on The Pike, a street of amusement, a full mile long, with the shows of all nations in gay and enticing array

In the ten minutes' walk many of the main exhibit palaces have been passed. These comprise the largest and grandest collection of architectural triumphs ever assembled in any one place. Notwithstanding its close proximity to these scenes of gaiety and splendor, noise and confusion, The Inside Inn offers a delightful retreat. During the noon hour the visitor may retire for a brief rest and resume his delightful task of sight-seeing refreshed and all the more able to appreciate and enjoy the World's Fair wonders.

The rates at this hotel within the grounds are no higher than those charged elsewhere. A good room may be had for $1.50 per day, including admission to the grounds Other rooms may be had up to $5.00 per day, according to the luxuries demanded. There is a restaurant in the building with a seating capacity for 2,500 persons.

Hill's Opening Speech.

Binghamton, N. Y., Aug. 26. — Former Senator David B Hill opened the Democratic campaign in Broome county in a speech at the agricultural fair at Deposit. In the course of his address Senator Hill touched upon the tariff situation, saying he believed in an honest revision of the tariff laws so that vast corporate interests should not be subserved to the detriment of the people. Referring to the financial interests of the country the senator said the gold standard had been irrevocably established, so that there is no necessity for a change. The Democratic party, which established the present currency system, can safely be trusted whenever the necessity shall arrive to make such changes for the best interests of the people.

Rome, Aug. 26. — Cardinal Satolli went to the vatican to visit the pope for the first time since his return from his visit to the United States. Just as his eminence arrived at the papal apartment Pope Pius was coming out to receive a body of Sardinian pilgrims who were in waiting. SKIN DISEASES

Altoona, Pa., June 20, 1903.
I was afflicted with Tetter in bad shape It would appear in blotches as large as my hand, a yellowish color, and scale off You can imagine how offensive it was. For twelve years I was afflicted with this trouble. At night it was a case of scratch and many times no rest at all. Seeing the good the medicine was doing a friend who was taking it for Eczema, I commenced it, and as a result the eruption began to dry up and disappear, and to-day I am practically a well man. Only two tiny spots are left on the elbow and shin, where once the whole body was affected. I have every confidence in the medicine, and feel sure that in a short time these two remaining spots will disappear. S. S. S. is certainly a great blood purifier, and has done me a world of good. I am grateful for what it has accomplished, and trust that what I have said will lead others who are similarly afflicted to take the remedy and obtain the same good results that I have.

STORM

KEPT MANY AWAY FROM THE CALL LECTURE.

Closing Day of the Institute Opened Under Favorable Auspices—The Registrations Number 293.

It was certainly a great disappointment that Thursday evening's storm kept away a large number who would otherwise have enjoyed the very excellent treat afforded by Mr. Call's lecture, "The Problems of Public Service" at the High School Chapel.

The lecture was certainly all that had been promised, and much more, and those who braved the weather to hear it were in every way repaid. Mr. Call has personality which would win him hearers under any circumstances, particularly when his subject is one which can not fail to be of interest to any audience of cultured American citizens. A thorough acquaintance and masterful handling of his subject left nothing to be desired.

FRIDAY MORNING.

The closing day of the Institute opened under very favorable auspices, the cool weather being doubly pleasant after the heat which made mental activity a burden on Thursday. Friday's exercises were opened by singing, conducted by Mr. Yeardley, and by devotional exercises of Scripture reading demanded.

The first number on the morning's program was a fifteen minutes talk on "Scientific Temperance," by Mrs. J. Frank Smith, of Mt. Vernon, O., W. C. T. U. State Superintendent of scientific instruction in schools and colleges. Mrs. Smith's appeal was that of a mother, a returned missionary, and a Christian woman, to the teachers of the public schools, to aid in the temperance work as they alone could do. The teacher's influence, she said, is stronger even than that of the mother in the home, or the minister in the pulpit, because the teacher understands and can describe to her pupil the scientific aspect of a subject which can not be taught by moral suasion alone.

She spoke of the various state laws, which impel the teaching of scientific temperance in the various grades, and gave a brief history of this phase of the work, of its application in different places, and of various aids to the teacher.

One of he most interesting numbers of the week's program was Mr. Call's lecture "Education and Crime."

He opened by saying that one of the strongest evidences of the world's progress is that we have gradually come to look for the reforming of the world through the uplifting influences of culture and education. The rise of the scientific element in our attitude toward education, gives promise of not far distant solution of this most difficult question.

One of the most difficult problems ever considered is that of the reformatory. Filled with the lowest and most offensive class of offenders—full grown men, the scum of society— the former idea seemed simply to rid the world of the offender's presence—to shoot him, hang him, incarcerate him behind prison bars—in some way to free itself of his troublesome personality.

A modern attitude toward crime is to regard it as a disease. An absolutely healthy man does not have dyspepsia, neither does he commit crime. Hence the fallacy of the older methods of punishment which sought only retribution and revenge, and usually accomplished only defamation.

Many years since plans for prison reform were begun to be considered. Noted reformers have given their life to the formation and advocacy of various schemes of reform. John Howard, Edward Livingston, John Wichern, Frederick Demetz, Alexander Mackonochie, Sir Walter Crofton, are noted names. The Quakers, as a class, have done much in this direction. What should be a familiar example of seemingly successful prison reform, is that accomplished through the efforts of Mr. Z. R. Brockway, which have culminated in the establishment of the State reformatory at Elmira, N. Y., one of the first to embody modern methods.

A practical step in the study of modern solution of the remedy for this disease of crime, considered the imaginary case of "Jim Brown," a

LOCUST STREET

CAR LINE ABANDONED BY THE RAILWAY COMPANY.

Removal of Tracks In West End Has Commenced—Not Known What Will Be Done With Rails.

The Locust street car line was abandoned Friday and the rails at the West End of the line are being taken up. It is not announced what will be done with these rails, nor any proposed extensions that may be made.

This line which parallels the Church street line, was built for interurban traffic and was used by the Buckeye Lake company before the combination of street railway interests. It has been generally known that traffic on this line has been light owing to the short run and to the fact that it paralleled two other roads but the supposition was that the company would extend the line at the west end so as to take in new territory rather than abandon it altogether.

IN THE FIELD OF SPORT

ALL JEFFRIES

THAT'S THE WAY IT LOOKS TO NEWARK SPORTSMEN.

There Seems to Be Very Little Enthusiasm Here Over Tonight's Boxing Event.

There seems to be very little enthusiasm in Newark anent the battle tonight between Jeffries and Monroe, to decide the heavyweight championship. In fact this condition prevails all over the country and one does not have to look far for a reason. The bout appears too much one sided to be interesting. In fact in well posted sporting circles it is generally believed that the postponement was not so much to give the champion's knee a chance to mend, as to give the promoters a chance to better advertise the fight and give it the appearance of a contest by the effect that rumors of Jeffries' poor condition might have. In Jeffries fights heretofore he has been up against men of proven fistic ability, who either fought very much the way he did, or far outclassed him in some one branch, as Corbett did in boxing. With Monroe it is different.

The miner has no claims to be considered even in Jeffries' class as a pugilist along any line, and when he gets in the ring with the big boilermaker tonight, this assertion will be proven.

So confident are local sports of the outcome that not a resort in Newark that has heretofore received ticker reports by rounds, has made arrangements to get tonight's battle. There is absolutely no betting on the result, a few small wagers having been put up on the number of rounds it will last. A number of men who follow the fistic game closely expressed opinions this morning as follows:

S. McCort—"There is nothing to it but Jeffries. He will win easily. I have not made a bet, but have offered good odds on the boilermaker with no takers."

Charley Slane—"I wish I could think Munroe would win, and if I were sure of it I would make a barrel of money. But it's all Jeffries."

Jimmy Fitzgerald—"I can't figure Munroe in at any stage. Jeffries will win easily."

Charley Bingmann—"The talk about Jeffries' knee handicapping him in tonight's battle is all for effect. You will find he is in elegant shape, will not lose his head, and wil win easily."

Charley Henry, Barney Byrnes, Will Driscoll, Frank Bader and many others expressed similar opinions.

NEWARK HORSE

After Dropping Two Heats Took the Third and May Win Unfinished Race at London.

London, O., Aug. 26—Pinchem Wilkes, stone blind, dropped in yesterday for a little easy money that the Madison county fair folks had hung up for free-for-all pacers.

He pulled down the cash and gave some 10,000 people a splendid exhibition on a half-mile track that cannot be rated fast.

Milton S, the pride of Urbana, was the one horse that old Pinchem had to beat. The trick was easily turned.

Just as soon as it was finished it began to rain and poured for two hours.

This advent of so much dampness left the 2:17 pace unfinished as Oscar from Newark, took a tab of 2:14 1-4 in cutting Colonel Coit out of the third heat.

This race and the 2:30 trot which was not touched at all will be on Friday in addition to the regular card. The summaries:

BIG HOTEL IN THE WOODS

Tavern Inside the World's Fair Grounds, Surrounded By a Forest, Offers a Luxurious and Restful Retreat.

COMPORT AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

The comfort for the visitor to an exposition was never the subject for so much intelligent thought and preparation as it has been at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition at St. Louis.

One of the features that cannot fail to appeal to the visitor is the convenience and comfort afforded by The Inside Inn, a structure of 2,257 rooms, covering an area of 400 to 800 feet, wholly within the World's Fair grounds.

Probably no hotel ever built commands a view so diversified or grand From the wide verandas that surround the mammoth structure a wonderful panorama spreads before one. Many of the state buildings, with their giant and magnificent structures, present their most attractive facades. Some of the foreign buildings may be seen, and the forest of towers and turrets, domes and minarets, rising above the great exhibit palaces and seen through the forests of real trees that surround the hostelry, give token of the other glories that lie beyond

A leisurely walk of five minutes will land the visitor on the main terrace in front of Festival Hall, the center of the "main picture" of the exposition, the grandest spectacle ever produced by man. Another five minutes' walk and the visitor may find himself on The Pike, a street of amusement, a full mile long, with the shows of all nations in gay and enticing array

In the ten minutes' walk many of the main exhibit palaces have been passed. These comprise the largest and grandest collection of architectural triumphs ever assembled in any one place. Notwithstanding its close proximity to these scenes of gaiety and splendor, noise and confusion, The Inside Inn offers a delightful retreat. During the noon hour the visitor may retire for a brief rest and resume his delightful task of sight-seeing refreshed and all the more able to appreciate and enjoy the World's Fair wonders.

The rates at this hotel within the grounds are no higher than those charged elsewhere. A good room may be had for $1.50 per day, including admission to the grounds Other rooms may be had up to $5.00 per day, according to the luxuries demanded. There is a restaurant in the building with a seating capacity for 2,500 persons.

Hill's Opening Speech.

Binghamton, N. Y., Aug. 26. — Former Senator David B Hill opened the Democratic campaign in Broome county in a speech at the agricultural fair at Deposit. In the course of his address Senator Hill touched upon the tariff situation, saying he believed in an honest revision of the tariff laws so that vast corporate interests should not be subserved to the detriment of the people. Referring to the financial interests of the country the senator said the gold standard had been irrevocably established, so that there is no necessity for a change. The Democratic party, which established the present currency system, can safely be trusted whenever the necessity shall arrive to make such changes for the best interests of the people.

Rome, Aug. 26. — Cardinal Satolli went to the vatican to visit the pope for the first time since his return from his visit to the United States. Just as his eminence arrived at the papal apartment Pope Pius was coming out to receive a body of Sardinian pilgrims who were in waiting. SKIN DISEASES

Altoona, Pa., June 20, 1903.

I was afflicted with Tetter in bad shape It would appear in blotches as large as my hand, a yellowish color, and scale off You can imagine how offensive it was. For twelve years I was afflicted with this trouble. At night it was a case of scratch and many times no rest at all. Seeing the good the medicine was doing a friend who was taking it for Eczema, I commenced it, and as a result the eruption began to dry up and disappear, and to-day I am practically a well man. Only two tiny spots are left on the elbow and shin, where once the whole body was affected. I have every confidence in the medicine, and feel sure that in a short time these two remaining spots will disappear. S. S. S. is certainly a great blood purifier, and has done me a world of good. I am grateful for what it has accomplished, and trust that what I have said will lead others who are similarly afflicted to take the remedy and obtain the same good results that I have.

STORM

KEPT MANY AWAY FROM THE CALL LECTURE.

Closing Day of the Institute Opened Under Favorable Auspices—The Registrations Number 293.

It was certainly a great disappointment that Thursday evening's storm kept away a large number who would otherwise have enjoyed the very excellent treat afforded by Mr. Call's lecture, "The Problems of Public Service" at the High School Chapel.

The lecture was certainly all that had been promised, and much more, and those who braved the weather to hear it were in every way repaid. Mr. Call has personality which would win him hearers under any circumstances, particularly when his subject is one which can not fail to be of interest to any audience of cultured American citizens. A thorough acquaintance and masterful handling of his subject left nothing to be desired.

FRIDAY MORNING.

The closing day of the Institute opened under very favorable auspices, the cool weather being doubly pleasant after the heat which made mental activity a burden on Thursday. Friday's exercises were opened by singing, conducted by Mr. Yeardley, and by devotional exercises of Scripture reading and prayer, led by the Rev. Mr. Fulton. A vocal solo by Prof. Irwin afforded much pleasure, and encore being demanded.

The first number on the morning's program was a fifteen minutes talk on "Scientific Temperance," by Mrs. J. Frank Smith, of Mt. Vernon, O., W. C. T. U. State Superintendent of scientific instruction in schools and colleges. Mrs. Smith's appeal was that of a mother, a returned missionary, and a Christian woman, to the teachers of the public schools, to aid in the temperance work as they alone could do. The teacher's influence, she said, is stronger even than that of the mother in the home, or the minister in the pulpit, because the teacher understands and can describe to her pupil the scientific aspect of a subject which can not be taught by moral suasion alone.

She spoke of the various state laws, which impel the teaching of scientific temperance in the various grades, and gave a brief history of this phase of the work, of its application in different places, and of various aids to the teacher.

One of he most interesting numbers of the week's program was Mr. Call's lecture "Education and Crime."

He opened by saying that one of the strongest evidences of the world's progress is that we have gradually come to look for the reforming of the world through the uplifting influences of culture and education. The rise of the scientific element in our attitude toward education, gives promise of not far distant solution of this most difficult question.

One of the most difficult problems ever considered is that of the reformatory. Filled with the lowest and most offensive class of offenders—full grown men, the scum of society— the former idea seemed simply to rid the world of the offender's presence—to shoot him, hang him, incarcerate him behind prison bars—in some way to free itself of his troublesome personality.

A modern attitude toward crime is to regard it as a disease. An absolutely healthy man does not have dyspepsia, neither does he commit crime. Hence the fallacy of the older methods of punishment which sought only retribution and revenge, and usually accomplished only defamation.

Many years since plans for prison reform were begun to be considered. Noted reformers have given their life to the formation and advocacy of various schemes of reform. John Howard, Edward Livingston, John Wichern, Frederick Demetz, Alexander Mackonochie, Sir Walter Crofton, are noted names The Quakers as a class, have done much in this direction. What should be a familiar example of seemingly successful prison reform, is that accomplished through the efforts of Mr. Z. R. Brockway, which have culminated in the establishment of the State reformatory at Elmira, N. Y., one of the first to embody modern methods.

A practical step in the study of modern solution of the remedy for this disease of crime, considered the imaginary case of "Jim Brown," a

LOCUST STREET

CAR LINE ABANDONED BY THE RAILWAY COMPANY.

Removal of Tracks In West End Has Commenced—Not Known What Will Be Done With Rails.

The Locust street car line was abandoned Friday and the rails at the West End of the line are being taken up. It is not announced what will be done with these rails, nor any proposed extensions that may be made.

This line which parallels the Church street line, was built for interurban traffic and was used by the Buckeye Lake company before the combination of street railway interests. It has been generally known that traffic on this line has been light owing to the short run and to the fact that it paralleled two other roads but the supposition was that the company would extend the line at the west end so as to take in new territory rather than abandon it altogether.

Our Democrats and Mr. Hurst.

The New Philadelphia Democrat and Times, in copying an article from The Advocate on the strength and popularity in Licking county of our candidate for Congress, Hon. J. E. Hurst, has made an error in quoting our article that we desire to have corrected. The Advocate stated that Judge Brister, who was the Licking county candiate before the convention, and his friends, WITHOUT EXCEPTION ALL OVER LICKING COUNTY, are giving their united, earnest support to Mr. Hurst, as all other Democrats in the county are doing."

The typographical error in the Democrat and Times makes the statement read that Judge Brister's friends "with few exceptions" are giving Mr. Hurst their united support, etc As there are NO EXCEPTIONS whatever among Judge Brister's friends in this regard, and as they are all lined up solidly for Mr. Hurst as well as all other Democrats in Licking county, they will take it as a favor to have the fact correctly stated. It is not the whole truth to say that the Licking Democracy are unitedly, solidly and loyally for Mr. Hurst, but the fact is the party leaders and the rank and file here are highly pleased with his candidacy, and this fact will be reflected by the good round majority by which he will carry the county. Furthermore, every Democratic leader in Licking county desires to have this fact emphasized and thoroughly understood throughout the district.

The New Philadelphia Democrat and Times will render our Democrats, as well as The Advocate, a favor, therefore, by republishing the extract from our article correctly.

It is understood that the Republicans will proceed with an organized effort throughout the country to use agricultural fairs for political purposes. An army of spellbinders in the guise of fakirs, ticket sellers and sideshow men will be sent out to champion the doctrines of imperialism and monopoly at county fairs. The game is an old one, and in former years the Republicans have extended it to the street corners of cities. This year, however, their activities in this direction will be chiefly directed toward the rural communities through the medium of the race track and the agricultural exhibitions. This simply shows that the Republican managers realize the necessity of resorting to such fakir schemes to catch votes. They know they cannot elect Roosevelt on the issues and the relative merits of the candidates.

Parker in 1896.

(McConnellsville Democrat.)

The only point of attack the East seems to have against Parker is that he supported and voted for Mr. Bryan in 1896 Very few Eastern Democrats in 1896 and 1900 agreed with the Democratic platform those years and Mr. Parker was one of them. A few thousand bolted the ticket and voted for Palmer or for McKinley, but Mr. Parker was not one of them. He voted for Mr. Bryan both times and makes no apology for having done so. He doubtless recognized Mr. Bryan as being one of the ablest men in the country, a statesman who was thoroughly honest and conscientious, and because he was such a man and the regular nominee of the party Mr. Parker supported him. It will be no element of weakness in Mr. Parker that he did so. He may now and then lose the support of a bolter for having done so, but he will hold the support of thousands of loyal Democrats because he was loyal to Mr. Bryan in 1896. If the Eastern Republicans can trump up nothing worse against Mr. Parker than the charge of having been loyal to his party, he need have no fears as to the result.

Lottie E. Beeney was born August 27, 1875. She was married to Harry L. McPeek, December 23, 1902, and to them one little one was given, Lewis Raymond McPeek, aged 9 months. Her life, though brief, was not in vain, for God makes no mistakes, and many lives have been touched and made more pure and tender by contact with hers. While it may seem to those who are left to mourn the loss of this loved one, that she perhaps, was called before her time, yet God who doeth all things so well, knew that the purpose of her sweet young life was accomplished, her mission fulfilled, and on August 17, 1904, at the age of 28 years, 11 months, 20 days He called her from this life to her heavenly home. Besides the husband and little son, she leaves a loving father and mother, one sister and four brothers, all of whom were privileged to be with her and to minister unto and comfort her during her last illness and to witness with what patience and unselfishness she bore her burden. A pure life has gone out to meet her Lord and Master. Truly, "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord."

NEWS OF THE STATE AND NEIGHBORHOOD

BIG GASSER

STRIKE OF 5,000,000 FEET IS MADE AT JUNCTION CITY.

Well No. 3 on the Griggs Farm in Perry County, Proves a Wonder and Creates Excitement.

Junction City, O., Aug. 26.—With a roar that could be heard for miles, and a violence endangering the derrick, the gas came rushing from a new well near here yesterday, with promises to be one of the greatest gassers ever struck in Ohio. The flow is estimated at 5,000,000 feet gas pressure. The well is on the Griggs farm and is known as No. 3. Late indications in the drilling were that a good gasser would be struck but nothing like the tremendous flow secured was expected.

The strike created great excitement in this territory and news of the strike spread rapidly. Already a rush for the field has been started and great activity in drilling operations in this field is expected to result.

A Cure for Asthma

The worst cases of Asthma in the world succumb readily to the one great cure that never fails. Dr. Rudolph Schiffmann's Asthma Cure almost performs miracles.

Mr. R. M. Spencer, 2380 Vermont avenue, Toledo, O., says: "Asthma has been growing on me for 3 years, until last summer the attacks became so severe that many nights I spent half the time gasping for breath. Doctors seemed to give no relief whatever, and I felt there was no hope for me, when a drug clerk recommended your Asthma Cure. Its effect is truly magical and gives complete relief in from 2 to 5 minutes."

Sold by all druggists at 50c and $1.00. Send 2c stamp to Dr. R. Schiffmann, Box 393, St. Paul, Minn., for a free sample package.

Children's School Shoes

It is natural for some children to come here for shoes as it is for them to go to school. But we are after new friends. Do you know that one of the worst things you can do to the children is to make them wear ill-fitting, poorly-made shoes? Shoes that pinch, leather that's not properly tanned?

We put in medium-weight leather in the uppers of our Children's School Shoes, and yet it must be soft—don't let anybody tell you that heavy leather can't be made soft.

We put nothing but oak-tanned sole-leather under these uppers—oak leather is the strongest sole leather made, and it's pliable besides.

All this costs money, but what extra we put into our shoes we get out again by selling so many. You can't find better School Shoes than ours, if you try, typical "tough," to whom seemingly no sentiments or punishements appealed. In his case, one feeling, the love of liberty, is seized upon. He is made to feel that he is under punishment, but only such as is directed for his own good.

Incarceration ideally would be for an indefinite period. We do not confine the insane for any stated time. Why then criminals, who are really exhibiting one phase of insanity.

Returning to a particular solution, isolate Jim Brown; make him "hustle"—work, work, work is the measure of value. Teach him some useful trade; weary him with close application; let him be under a species of military training; let him encounter some unpleasant features of his life each day. Many reforms which would be useful in his present life, are actually practiced in the Elmira reformatory, which has been mentioned. Others also have been introduced—a school of letters, manual training for defectives, a scientific dietary, physical training, religious and ethical training.

A "grading system" is advocated, as leading the men to self-reliance and hope for the future. A criminal entering the reformatory is considered neither very good nor very bad. The grading system gives him opportunity to rise from his first condition, marked by a brown suit, to a higher grade, marked by a blue suit, in which good behavior may give him promise of absolute release in eighteen months, whatever his original offense. As has been said, however, this rise in rank is absolutely dependent on behavior. If this be not satisfactory, he does not rise, but goes down to lower grades, where peculiar punishments, elsewhere to be discussed, are in effect.

The Elmira reformatory also divides the men in intellectual grades: academic, intermediate, and primary. The lessons and training given them in the reformatory school is in accord with the grade to which he has been assigned. Among other classes of training, thirty-six trades are to be taught, suitable to individual needs. There are sixteen companies organized for military drill. This particular school recognizes the different religious beliefs among its inmates—Protestant, Catholic and Hebrew. A full course of manual training is provided for. These have proved very effective among the men. It also is divided into three classes, the class into which each man is put being decided by his individual needs. One more grading is made, on a physical basis. Seven sub-divisions are considered: (1) anaemic and undeveloped, (2) semi-invalids, (3) feeble-minded: (4) aberrated intellects; (5) sexual perverts; (6) moral imbeciles; (7) new arrivals

America can ill afford to forget the dignity of labor, hence the universal value of learning a trade. In all trades there are various courses of study, facility in these being insisted upon. Through such aid, the prisoner cultivates thoroughness and pains-taking habits.

Every detail of this great work is the direct product of Mr. Brockway's genius. All this machinery has been put into operation in order that, at the expiration of twelve months, "Jim Brown" may be returned to his home, a well man. Why society does not erect similar institutions, to keep our children out of jail, instead of waiting until they get into prison cannot be told.

Why dwell particularly on the Elmira institution? Because there is danger that prejudice, and an embittered public press may do a great wrong to one of the noblest institutions of the age. It has been said that "every new schoolhouse closes a jail." At least, enough new school houses would close all the jails.

Poverty and crime are still with us. Such studies as these, directed at the very heart of the matter, appealing to the children through their educators, may assist in solution of the problem by teaching the young lessons of probity, intelligence and industry.

Mr. M. R. Scott was present in the audience during the morning, and at the conclusion of Mr. Call's address, was requested to supplement that address by any remarks he might see fit to make on the subject. Mr. Scott, in accepting the invitation, said that Mr Call's remarks were singularly in accord with his own views, therefore he would not spoil that address by repeating it. To the qualities that Mr. Call had suggested as essential to those engaged in the practical work of prison reform, Mr. Scott begged to add one quality, that of human sympathy. In one or two minor points he differed from opinions proposed, these points being considered from his point of view, as defective in the working of the Elmira reformatory, otherwise regarded as altogether a praiseworthy institution.

The force of vital human sympathy was urged in the building of human character. If you are not coming into close personal contact with your pupils as individuals, you are not as close to the Kingdom of Heaven as you should be. The same thought should hold good in the treatment of criminals, therein lying the essential secret of success.

Mr. Denny's time being reduced by previous claims upon it, he was obliged to greatly curtail his address. One of Tennyson's idyls was chosen for the basis of Mr. Denny's talk.

Prof. Miller wisely devoted his half hour's time to the conclusion of his address on Bonaparte.

THURSDAY MORNING.

Prof. Call's Lecture Concluded.

Home reading may be made helpful, as well as the class lesson. The latter may be aided by home work, the pupils bringing in original matter which will add to the interest in the lesson. Several books well adapted for such work were named, with suggestions tending to make the use of these works most helpful.

If these devices seem good, said the speaker, adopt them, but let every teacher remember that no wooden use of suggested plans will help him. The methods must be adopted as his own before he can profitably use them. The gist of this excellent and inspiring talk might well be borrowed from one of the quotations with which Mr. Call concluded: 'All is not so much what a boy knows when he leaves school, as what he loves."

Mr. Dennev, in taking up his subject, "English," referred to previous talks and the various thoughts therein considered. His proposed subject of "English composition," which had been intended for both of Thursday's talks, he announced would be considered only in the morning, certain forces having induced him, "as a member of the Humane society," to change his afternoon subject to "Preparation for Examinations in Literature"—a subject whose very nature promised a large and interested audience.

Returning to his original theme, "English composition," the attention of the audience was directed to a black-board outline indicating the trend of thought. The first essential as indicated by the outline, was that the mental attitude of the pupil be made favorable to his work. In the composition class the main business is composing, and composing as an art, at least three-fourths of the time should be given up to this work.

Every work of art represents the realization of some purpose. Every exercise in composition, oral or written, ought to have in the mind of the teacher a well deserved purpose. The work with which the pupil is engaged should prepare him to meet the exigencies of his future life; whether that work be writing "For Rent" notices, social invitations, telegrams, or any other thing whatever. In practicing such work, the mental attitude of the worker is that of one who has a job to do, and intends to do it.

One of the most abused words in connection with the subject of composition, is "audience." The child, as the older writer, has a right to know for what audience he is preparing his topic, and what phases of information he is supposed to touch upon. Be careful never to forget the audience. Give your pupil, if possible some real audience for whom he is to write. Then you will be working, not only for the future, but for the present.

The pupil about to begin writing, must ask himself certain questions, outlining the progress of his work. First, is the consideration, what not to say. There are dangers in non consideration of this question. Next, decide what to say, and thirdly, how to say it. The purpose of every step should be explained to the pupil. Self-interest is one of the strongest reasons for care in composition; courtesy is the second.

To teach a good many points, depend on your pupils' own correction. Oral composition is highly valuable, and a saving of drudgery to the teacher; do not allow written themes to accumulate until they appall you.

In a subject of such human interest, the teacher's preparation ranks highest of all, and above everything else in the instructor's equipment is a human interest in his class. Get up a great enthusiasm among your pupils for their native tongue, "That ample speech, strong to endure, yet prompt to bend for every human need."

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

The large number of teachers present at the opening of Thursday afternoon's session paid a mark compliment to the instructors by the steadily maintained interest, in spite of the oppressive heat.

Singing, as usual, opened the meeting, after which Mr. Nichols, O. T. R. C. secretary, read a list of those who had been appointed to serve as township secretaries.

Mr. Call took up the subject "How to Teach Writing," with the advice, "Let us not demand copper-plate from our pupils, but let us demand legibility. In connection with legibility, let there be simplicity, from view point of both teacher and pupil; and these qualities should be accompanied with a certain amount of speed.

A few simple rules will serve to obtain uniformity. Plainly indicate and thoroughly learn characteristics of all letters. Do not let capital and long letters occupy more than two-thirds of the whole space. There must be uniformity of stroke and slope. A consideration of space is necessary for good page effect.

An imaginary lesson illustrating this point supposed a page on which is written an essay on "Brazil," illustrated by a map of Brazil, and the picture of a coffee plant. The disposal of title, illustrations, and subject matter, with proper provision for margins, developed an orderly, well balanced plan for the final page effect.

"If the measure of a man's relation is his daily life, the measure of a child's culture is his daily life. Accept only his best work, his best today promises another best at some future time."

Choose carefully your materials. The size, shape and color of the paper and the materials used for your work should depend entirely on what you propose to put upon your paper.

Certain manual requirements should not be ignored in writing. Both nibs of the pen should rest upon the paper. The position of the pen is an open question. One suggested is the holding of the pen at an angle of 45 degrees with the body. Let the paper, if this plan be carried out, be placed at right angles with the desk, upon which the whole of the left forearm is placed, with the right forearm half on the desk.

In writing there need be considered but three simple movements; seven combinations will furnish all the exercise essential to their perfection. The children should be candidly told to look ahead in their writing. After the seven elementary exercises have been sufficiently practiced, they may readily be combined into words without having the mind halt over each combination of forms.

If the end and aim of all writing be legibility, the vertical system must be acknowledged best. Does it lack individuality? Not at all. The place for development of individuality in any art is not looked for in childhood; uniformity, conformity to rule, is the basis of all school instruction. If we can get a legible writing, individuality, a natural product of maturity, will take care of itself. Another objection, is that the vertical writing is slow. This objection is already met, because the majority of legible writers, though trained to slant writing, in the attainment of speed tend to the vertical position. The vertical is the easiest, and the easiest is the quickest.

The emblem of symbolism enters into writing, and aids us very materially. A knowledge of them will not confuse the children, but will seize on their imaginations and be an inspiration to them.

Prof. Denney, in accordance with his promise in the morning, took up "a practical question of English composition—how to prepare for an examination in English literature." Prof. Denney announced that he had no infallible scheme, but considered the question a practical, social one, capable of following the outline given in the preceding lecture. In this case your audience is the examiner; try to know him thoroughly. Be sure that the sensible examiner will ask only important questions, will devote the major part of the examination, not to historical matters, but to a practical criticism of literary models, and remember that neatness counts in your work.

In beginning your study, take an inventory of the stock of knowledge on hand. Provide yourself with a good sized notebook; then consider.

I. How much poetry do I know? Make yourself acquainted with (1) the Epic. Know that the great epic is, (a) majestic in style; (b) simple in manner; (c) involves a superhuman element. The English has no Great Epics, but among epic poems, consider first Milton's "Paradise Lost." If you have never read it, do so. The second sub-division of the epic is the Metrical Romance, of which typical examples are Scott's "Lady of the Lake," "Marmion," etc. Third in the evolution of the Epic, we have the Ballad. The writers of ancient ballads are unknown, but there are modern imitations, e. g., "The Wreck of the Hesperus." The ballad is (a) shorter than the metrical romance (b) simple—deals with lowly life; (c) has an element of superstition. Fourth among subdivisions is the Pastoral Poem; fifth, the Idyl, e. g., Tenneyson's "Idyls of The King." Remember that every narrative poem is an epic. The poet describes the action, but has no part in it.

2. The Lyric Poem. Differing from the Epic in that it is personal in character. The poet is a part of the poem. One form of Lyric Poetry is the song, which must have the characteristics of (a) shortness; (b) one simple biographical sentiment (c) division into stanzas. The second form of Lyric verse, the Ode, is written only in an exalted frame of mind, superinduced by a frame of mind indicating frenzied admiration of hate, awe or worship. Third, the Sonnet, has fixed rules as to length and characteristics; a splendid example is Milton's "Sonnet on My Blindness." A fourth division, Dramatic Lyrics, of which Browning is the best known writer, fail to exhaust all poems in this class, the remainder being known simply as lyrics. (3) Dramatic Poetry is subdivided into Tragedy and Comedy. The great tragedies have usually a superhuman element, e. g., the Ghost of Hamlet, "Twelfth Night" is suggested as one of Shakespeare's best comedies. (4) Didactic Poetry, a much abused class included versified philosophy and satire. A good example of the latter is Byron's "English Bards and Scotch Reveries."

II. Having concluded poetry, we consider "What prose do we know?" Think of (1) the sketch, or short story; as an example of either, read Irving's "Sketch Book." (2) the novel may be classified as (a) novel of manners, e. g., Thackery's "Vanity Fair;" (c) psychological novel, of which George Eliot's are typical; (2) The essay is sub-divided into (a) meditative essay (Lamb's "Dream Children"); (b) the Historical essay; (c) the Philosophical essay (John Stuart Mill on "Liberty"); (d) the biographical element (Carlyle's Essay on Burns); (e) the Argumentative essay, e. g., Burke's "Conciliation."

Following this outline, Mr. Denney proposed a number of pertinent questions for the study of style and history of literature; ending with an earnest plea that, once the examination be passed, the student take up his books with a determination to devote future study to the subject, not through desire for a certificate, but for a love of this wide and beautiful subject.

"Napoleon—His Place in History," by Mr. Miller.

Mr. Miller invited his hearers to go with him, in imagination, to southern France, near the blue waters of the Mediterrancan. The scene to be depicted shows a table, on it a map, surrounding which are a number of officers, concentrating their attention upon it. Near them stands a young man, not large in stature, physically weak, but with a countenance of great life and animation. He it was who, pointing out the plans on the map, declaring that he, with a few soldiers, could capture the fort they desired. Capture it he did: then for the first time France heard the name of Napoleon Bonaparte. In little time his name was in every mouth, all the country need the life of this boy, who had gained his early education as a charity student—a student wonderfully fond of mathematics and history, poor in belles-lettres.

From this charity school he had gone to a military school, where he graduated with high honors in mathematics, but still with poor standing in studies of literary interest.

After Napoleon's initial victory at Toulon, attention turned to Paris, then in possession of the frenzied mob, planning their attack on the Tuileries. Napoleon, who had seen the destruction of Marat, Danton and other revolutionists, was given forces, and in six hours was master of Paris.

France at this time had three armies, that in Italy being without a commander. This command was given to Napoleon; and despite the officer's resolution not to accept him, his powerful personality swept all their prejudices before it.

In the first campaign of ten months in Italy, one Austrian army after another was conquered; fifty million francs were poured into the French treasury; kings were enthroned and dethroned at the will of the Little Corporal; France fell in homage at his feet.

Then came the contest between France and England, culmination of a long standing bitterness. From this point, touching only the hilltops in the life of this great man, we see the battle of the Pyramids, where the commander accomplished wonders by his inspired words: "Soldiers, forty centuries are looking down upon you." Quickly following, we note the battle of the Nile; the return to France, hastened by a report of the destined overthrow of the directory; the formation of the counsulate, which made Napoleon master of France. What does he do? Commences at once to rebuild overthrown France.

In 1800 comes Marengo, the first great battle of the Nineteenth century. Back in Paris within six months, the question arises: "Shall Napoleon be counsul of France for life?" From 7,000,000 votes only two hundred said "no."

Napoleon at once begins to build school houses, to found universities. He established a fund whose interest should go as a prize for scientific discovery or invention. Not many years ago, an American, Prof. Alexander Graham Bell, won this prize through his telephone.

On May 3, 1804, by a vote of the Senate the counsular seat was made a throne, and Napoleon become emperor of France, crowned on December 2 of the same year. By his side was crowned the beautiful Empress Josephine.

There are some who ridicule the mistakes of the new French court; but France idolizes her emperor. Other nations of Europe razed against the assumption of this stripling, but Napoleon took as his motto, "Time is everything."

In the next year the battle of Austerlitz marked another step in this remarkable carreer. From every direction enemies rise against France. Napoleon makes and unmakes kingdoms and kings.

For want of an heir to the throne, he divorces Josephine, and marries the daughter of the Hapsburg family, the Austrian princess, Marie. When a son, the little king of Rome, is born, France goes wild with delight.

The lateness of the hour made it impossible for Mr. Miller to further conclude this most interesting subject.

CHAPTER XXII.

THE one on foot and the two on horseback entered the fortress which had hitherto proved impregnable and traversed its streets until they came to the Crown inn. Oxford was no longer the home of learning for any art save that of war. A few students still strolled its thoroughfares, but the military man was everywhere. The colleges had been turned into barracks and arsenals; the king himself lived in Christchurch, over the towers of which floated the royal standard, now almost the only red spot in all England.

As the party came to a halt the officer turned to Armstrong. "A propitious meeting," he said. "Here comes the lord great chamberlain himself."

Armstrong noted the approach of a man with a countenance so remarkable that it might have been taken as typical of war. From brow to chin was drawn a long red scar, while another ran transversely across the forehead just over the eyes, so that there flamed from his face an angry cross that gave a most sinister expression to a visage which, lacking these time healed wounds, would have been handsome. The chamberlain stopped abruptly in his advance, his gaze riveted upon the girl, and there came into his eyes a look of such malignity that Armstrong instantly turned his glance upon his traveling companion.

The girl's cheeks had gone deathly white, and she swayed blindly in her saddle, perilously near to falling. The young man sprang from his horse and caught her just in time. Bitterly he blamed himself for this unexpected collapse, cursing his persistence on the road when he had plainly seen that some strong emotion tormented her. This mental perturbation, combined with the physical strain she had undergone during their long journey, fully accounted for the prostration of the moment at the end.

"My poor lass," he said regretfully, "I am to blame. I am a thoughtless, selfish hound to have so sorely troubled you with my insistence."

"It is not that," she whispered faintly, leaning heavily on him with the pathetic helplessness of a tired child, a dependence which sent a thrill of pity and love for her tingling to his finger ends. "Take me in; take me in quickly. I am ill."

Now the lord great chamberlain, all smiles and courtesy, stepped forward and said with authority to the innkeeper:

"The chief rooms in the house for the lady. Turn out whoever occupies them, whatever their quality."

The landlord called his wife, and Frances was given into her care.

The officer introduced the traveler to the high official:

"My lord chamberlain, this gentleman says he has come from the Scottish nobles with a message for his majesty. Sir, M. de Courcy, lord great chamberlain to the king."

Frenchman and Scot bowed to each other, the grace of the gesture being almost entirely in favor of the former despite his marred face.

"Sir," said Armstrong to the officer, "I thank you for your guidance, and you, my lord," to De Courcy, "for your kind and prompt command with respect to the lady. She has had a long and tiring journey through a dangerous country, under continual fear of arrest, and so it is not to be wondered that a woman should succumb to the strain at the last."

"The officer who has left us did not give me your name, sir," said De Courcy.

"I am William Armstrong, somewhat known on the border, a Scottish gentleman and a loyal subject of his majesty the king."

"Then you are very welcome in Oxford, and I am sure his majesty wishes there were more like you in the environs thereof and the regions beyond. It is now too late to see the king today, and probably you are not loath to meet a night's rest after a hard day's riding. I will arrange a conference for you with his majesty as soon as possible."

"Thank you. If I may hint that every day is of value you will perhaps urge upon the king the danger of delay."

"I shall not fail to do so. Good night."

For the first time in his life Armstrong left his horse to the care of others and entered the inn to inquire after the welfare of the lady who absorbed his thoughts. She sent word that she was quite recovered, but would see no one until the morrow. With this he was fain to be content, and he wandered about the town in the gathering dusk, hoping to do her a service by discovering the whereabouts of Lord Rudby's son, to whom he supposed she carried some message from her brother.

He learned that this young man, who was a captain in the king's army, had been sent, it was supposed, to London, but nothing had been heard of him for a month or more, and whether he was prisoner or not none could say. This intelligence depressed Armstrong, who feared that the girl had taken her long journey for nothing and that the failing to find the one she sought might entail serious consequences upon her brother or herself, for each in turn had manifested great concern touching the mission she had undertaken.

Next morning his first visitor was the lord chamberlain, who expressed deep regret that the king was indisposed and could not see any emissary from the Scots that day. The high official spoke feelingly of the disappointment the monarch had been called upon to endure through the unmerited success of his rebellious subjects, and this statement seemed to the traveler only what was to have been expected.

During the day Armstrong was privileged in securing one brief interview with Frances. The landlord had placed two rooms at her disposal, and in the scantily furnished parlor the young man had called upon her. The improvement she had affirmed the evening before was scarcely borne out by her appearance, for she was wan and dispirited, so much so that when Armstrong announced the disappearance of Captain Rudby the tidings did not seem to depress her more than was already the case.

However, the news clung to her mind, for as he was telling her that the king could not see him that day she suddenly said, in a tone which showed she had not been listening, that as Captain Rudby was not in Oxford there was no reason why she should stay—she would go on at once to Banbury and there await the coming of Armstrong. But the young man would not hear of such a course. It was impossible, he said, that an unprotected lady in the disturbed state of the country should travel alone between Oxford and Banbury. It was not likely that he would be held from the king more than another day, and then they would both set out together. Besides, she needed all the rest she could obtain before they turned north again.

The girl was too deeply dejected even to argue the question, when he so strenuously opposed her desire. It seemed that a contrary fate was tightening the coils around her, and all struggle against it was fruitless. There were unshed tears in her eyes as she glanced timidly up at him, and she had the haunted look of one who was trapped. The unforeseen meeting with De Courcy, although Cromwell's words should have prepared her for it, had completely unnerved her; that nightmare face of his confronting her whenever she closed her eyes. The past had come up before her in its most abhorrent guise. She remembered striking him fiercely with the jagged iron she happened to hold in her hand, and thought anything was justified that enabled her to escape his clutches, but that he would carry so fearful a disfiguration to his grave chilled her with fear of his vengeance; for if ever murder shone from a man's eyes it glared in his when she caught his first glance the evening before.

All during the night the terrifying vision drove sleep from her couch, and she pondered on some possible method of escape, but without result. How gladly she would have confided her peril to Armstrong, did she stand in honest relation to him, but she could not bring herself to ask help from a man whom she had just rejected and whom she would shortly rob. When Armstrong mentioned the absence of Rudby, she had utterly forgotten that the ostensible reason for this Oxford journey was to see him, and for a moment it appeared that here lay a loophole of escape, but Armstrong's outspoken opposition to her plan left her with no adequate excuse for persisting in it.

During this unsatisfactory coming together little was said by either. The girl sat in a chair by a small table, and he stood on the other side. Most of the time her head rested on her hand, and he saw she was near to tears. He censured himself again for his ill timed avowal of the day before, but saw no method by which he could annul its consequences save by saying nothing more.

On the third day of his stay in Oxford the suave De Courcy was compelled to bewail the continued indisposition of the king. There were various important matters awaiting his majesty's attention, he said, but nothing could be done until his recovery. Meanwhile, to pass time that must be hanging heavily on the visitor's hands, the thoughtful Frenchman suggested that Armstrong should indulge in a stroll around the fortifications. As soon as he was out of sight De Courcy hastened back to the inn, passed up the stair and knocked at the door of the room occupied by Frances Wentworth. On receiving permission to enter he went in and closed the door behind him. The girl, who had expected a different caller, rose from her chair and stood silent.

"Madam, this is a meeting which I have long looked forward to with pleasant anticipation."

"Sir, I regret that I have no share in your felicity."

"Perhaps you prefer that we should meet as enemies."

"I prefer that we should not meet at all, and, knowing this, you may be good enough to make your visit as short as possible."

"I cannot find words to express my sorrow on learning I am so unwelcome. I am sure that when last we met I did my best to make your visit as long as I could, so why should you wish to shorten mine?"

It seemed to the girl that there was something unnecessarily shameless in his allusion to a circumstance that had so disfigured him. As she made no reply he went on with airy nonchalance:

"Will you excuse me if I lock the door, and, showing that experience is a proficient schoolmaster, I ask the extension of your forgiveness to cover the act of putting the key in my pocket? We live and learn, you know. Not that I fear any interruption, for the innocent and excellent Scot is at this moment investigating our battlements and will not return this three hours or more."

The polite intruder locked the door and put the key in his pocket, then advanced toward her. She retreated to the other room, and for a moment he thought she was about to barricade herself within, but she reappeared on the instant with a jeweled dagger in her hand.

"I warn you, sir, that if you approach within striking distance I will pierce you to the heart."

The Frenchman smiled and waved his fine white hands with a gesture of inimitable grace.

"Fairest of the Wentworths," he said, "may I sit down, and if I place this table between us will you feel safer?"

"You will be safer so long as it remains between us."

"I assure you my own safety weighs but lightly with me. I implore you to be seated, for I cannot converse at ease with a lady who is standing."

"I prefer to stand. Your ingrained courtesy will then cause you to make our conference brief."

"It distresses me to say that you are prolonging the conference by standing. We have grave particulars of state policy to discuss, and I cannot begin while you are so cruel as to put me in the light"—

"Oh, very well!" cried Frances impatiently, taking her own chair, whereupon he, elegantly gracious, seated himself opposite her, with the table between them.

He waited for a few moments, but, she making no remark, he continued:

"Grief for the loss of you filled my heart. You think I come here as an enemy, but I come as a suppliant. In the folly of that time at Whitehall I refused you marriage, and I do not wonder you were wroth at me. I wish to atone for what you justly considered an insult, and am willing to marry you in the face of the world."

"I thank you."

"I shall ask no questions anent this awkward Scot who has been your courier, for I am sure you can have thought nothing of him."

"I thank you."

"You return thanks coldly, but I know that is the English nature. The fire of France is not to be expected in this northern clime, but if you say yes to my pleading I am satisfied."

"If I wished for fire I would go down and not abroad for it. I had sooner wed the fiend from the pit than you."

De Courcy laughed lightly.

"That were a sulphurous mating indeed! Still you see how I adore you when I restate my determination to occupy the devil's place at your side before the altar. You but whet my expectation, for I should dearly love to tame you as your Shakespeare tamed his shrew."

"That you shall never do while a hand's breadth of steel will rid me of you, or myself of the world. Escape is too easy."

"Not from an Oxford dungeon, my dear. This mediaeval town furnishes us with dark pits in which there is no fire, and consequently they have a cooling effect on the hottest temperament. These are pits of which I am the fiend. My dear, you underrate my power or overrate my patience."

"There are English gentlemen in Oxford. On what plea could you induce them to think that an English lady should be placed in a dungeon?"

"Yes, there are English gentlemen here, and some French gentlemen as well. They are unanimous in their detestation of a spy, male or female. Your man we shall hang out of hand, and there will be little difficulty about the pleasing task. I shall myself plead that your life be spared, and they will agree. Everything will be done with that beautiful legality which the English so much admire, but even from this moment you are entirely in my power, and a sensible woman should not need so much argument to convince her that the situation is hopeless."

"Armstrong is no spy."

"He may have difficulty in proving he is not. I am glad to note that you admit by inference that you are a spy."

"I can prove he is not a spy."

"Your evidence would be tainted. You are an accomplice. Besides, you could not clear him without condemning yourself."

"Such will I gladly do. I glory in that I would sacrifice myself with joy to save William Armstrong, the awkward Scot, as you called him. Besides, one word from me to Armstrong will transfer the danger to you. He will break you like a reed."

"Indeed, my dear, you do yourself injustice in threatening me. You shall have no opportunity of speaking your one word, for when next we meet, if we part now without coming to amicable arrangement, you will be on your knees to me pleading for his life."

"That will I not. I shall go to the king."

"Frances, you dishearten me and cast grave doubts on the possession of that sound sense with which I credited you. Was your first appeal to the king for a man's life so successful that you build hopes on a second?"

"If Charles had kept his word with me then he would not now be encaged in Oxford. He abandoned my father and clung to such as you, and not a foot of English ground remains to him but what he stands on."

"What would have happened had Strafford lived, neither you nor I can tell, and all discussion thereon is aside from our present purpose. Will you make terms with me?"

"I will not."

"You prefer the dungeon?"

"You dare not imprison me."

"Why?"

"Your master will not allow you."

"RISE, SIR WILLIAM ARMSTRONG."

"My dear, let me put a quietus forever upon your mad idea that any help is to be expected from the king. I beg you to believe that I speak the exact truth. Do you know what the king thinks of you?"

"He does not think of me at all. He has forgotten me."

"Pardon me. There you are mistaken. He thinks you came to Whitehall the day of your father's death to assassinate him. He believes that I imperiled my life to save his. The scars of your claws, however repulsive they may be to others, are to him a constant reminder of his supposed debt to me. Judge you then, my dear, what your position in Oxford would be did the king but dream you had crept surreptitiously into his stronghold. Need I say more?"

"No. But you should have paid better heed to what I said."

"What did you say?"

"I said your master would not permit you to injure me."

"But I have shown you that the king"—

"I am not speaking of the king. Your master is Oliver Cromwell."

Either the cross on his face became redder or the sudden pallor of his other features made it appear so. Slowly he withdrew his elbows from the table and leaned back in his chair, moistening his lips, gazing on the girl with the intensity of a newborn fear. She sat motionless, returning his look without flinching. For some moments the room was as silent as if it were deserted. At last he spoke huskily:

"What do you expect to gain by making so absurd a statement?"

The girl rose, with a gesture of impatience, walked to the window and back, then to the window again, and unfastened a latch that let free a latticed sash, as if the room stifled her and she wanted air. Then she exclaimed:

"Oh, let us have a truce to this fooling. I am tired of it. You say I shall beg on my knees to you, but you have mistaken your own attitude for mine. Why do I make such a statement? Because Cromwell told me in Northampton that if I met difficulty in Oxford you, his spy, would assist me."

"Heavens!"

"Aye, heavens! You did not think such a man would blab out secrets of death to a woman, but there is this to say on his behalf, that he was merely recommending one spy to another. He thought mutual safety would be their bond of union, and he was right."

"Then you knew you would meet me in Oxford? Why did you seem so distraught when the event happened? That was acting, I suppose, to fall the easier into the arms of the Scot."

"I had no need to act to bring that about. I hoped to avoid you, and would have done so but for the chance encounter. And now you see, sir, that my peril is as nothing to yours. I have but to strike open this leaded pane and cry to the officers passing in the street: 'I am the daughter of Lord Strafford. Help me, for here I am caged with a French spy, a creature who has sold king and comrades for Cromwell's gold.'"

"Do not speak so loud, woman! There is no need for frenzy. I did but jest when I spoke of molesting you."

"I am in no jesting mood."

"You do not need to tell me that. I am quite willing to further your behests, if you but trust me and tell me what you want."

"Can you expect me to trust you?" asked the girl, coming back to the table.

"I suppose I have not earned your trust."

"Oh, but you have. I trust you implicitly because you stand under the shadow of the scaffold, and at a word from me the bolt is drawn. You will postpone all thought of revenge until your neck is out of the noose; of that I am very well convinced. I refuse to make terms with you, but I give my commands, which you must rigidly follow unless you court calamity. You will take Armstrong to the king and cease to block his way. You will see that we are free to leave Oxford and are unmolested while we are within these walls. One false move and you bring your doom upon you."

"I implore you to be calm, madam. I swear I will carry out your orders to the letter. Do not, I beg of you, take panic at any chance word by another."

"Unlock the door and leave me. See that you do not come again."

MOSQUITO BITE ANTIDOTE.

Seaman Tells of Relief Afforded by Using Beer Externally.

Captain Charles K. Adams of the Maryland Pilots' association reports having discovered a new antidote for mosquito bites, which, according to his statement, also proved a perfect protection against their attention when sleep was sought, says the Baltimore Sun. He gives the formula in the following words:

"A few days ago on board the steamer Pilot, when the vessel was alive with mosquitoes, the thermometer 106 degrees in the shade and the sand dunes on Cape Henry blinded the eyes, I sought—I know not why—refreshment in a bottle of beer, but the heat and viciousness of the mosquitoes prevented me from enjoying the beverage.

"Thoughtlessly I poured some of the fluid in one hand and began to rub a ridge of mosquito bites that formed a bracelet around my wrist. There was a momentary smarting, followed by cessation of the itching, and then I felt relieved. I began to think of cause and effect and concluded that if beer would reduce the discomfort of mosquito stings maybe it would prevent the marauder inflicting them. I took what remained of the contents of the bottle and bathed my face, hands and feet and lay down for a sleep. It is no exaggeration to say that not one insect got in his work. I awoke refreshed and without a mark of his business end about me anywhere.

"I intend to keep up the preventive even if I have to forfeit the refreshing pleasure that a glass of beer gives me when lying at the mosquito paradise off Cape Henry."

Back From Vacation.

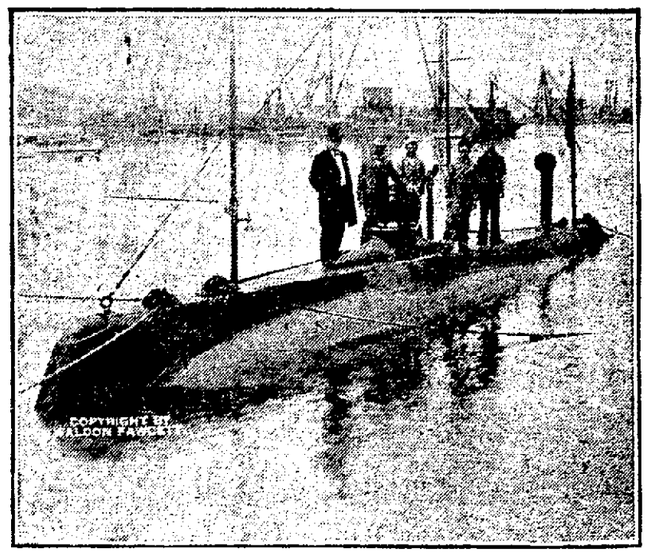

Back from my summer vacation,
In the noisy old town once more,
Away from the vicious mosquitoes
And the chiggers that sting and bore,
With my neck all raw and blistered
And my nose as red as a beet,
I find that the city is welcome
And that life in town is sweet.

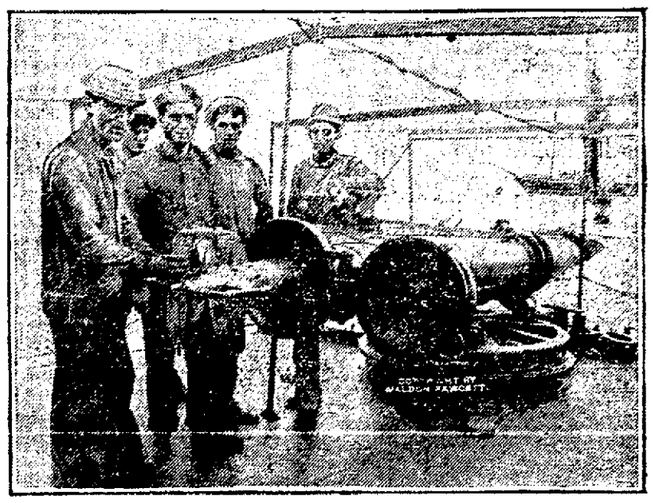

Back from my summer vacation,
Away from the worms that creep
And the gnats that crawl down my neckband
And bother me while I sleep.
Afar from the flies and the spiders
And the June bugs that biff and pelt,
I am glad to get back from the country
And the loneliness I have felt.

Back from my summer vacation,
And the soggy old stuff to eat,
Where a restaurant meal is a pleasure
And a table d'hote is a treat,
Where there's something to do besides grumble
And something to do besides wait,
Where I get my papers each morning,
And they're never a whole day late.

Back from my summer vacation,
In the good old town once more,
Afar from the oppressive silence,
To the rush and the roar and roar.
In the city there's something doing,
There's joy in the meet of might,
And the soul expands with the struggle
And grows in the shock of fight.

THE SUBMARINE BOAT HOLLAND AND HOW A TORPEDO IS MADE READY FOR FIRING.

Inventor John P. Holland, who devised the successful type of submarine boat which bears his name, is now at work on a new submarine which, he declares, will be even more wonderful than the Holland. He is also inventing a flying machine which he says will retail for $10, so that even people of limited means may own their own pair of wings. The lower picture, which was taken on one of Uncle Sam's torpedo boats, shows how a torpedo is placed in the torpedo tube preparatory to its being expelled by compressed air in the direction of an enemy's battleship.

James Malley, Who Was Arrested Here After a Hard Struggle, Is Accused of Burglary.

James Malley, who was arrested by B. & O. officer Foreman and officer Zergiebel after a hard struggle, and was heavily fined for pointing fire arms and train riding, was released Thursday evening to Chief of Police Arter of Zanesville, who has a good case of burglary against Malley.

The prisoner was placed in the Zanesville prison and will await trial on the charge of burglarizing the saloon of Edward Pickrill, at 750 Putnam avenue, on last Tuesday evening. A bull dog revolver, whiskey, cigars and pennies stolen are valued at $11.

When seen in the police station Thursday evening, Patrolman Brown of Zanesville who had been stationed in the southern end of the city during the month, recognized Malley as being one he had seen before. When under a tree near Arthur street and the Ohio and Little Kanawa railway tracks on Tuesday, Malley was in company with two other individuals. One was a stoop-shouldered, elderly man and the other a tall mulatto. These two were seen with Malley at the time the latter was arrested. The tall mulatto escaped, while the old man giving his name as Smith, is still held in the Newark police station.

ODD FELLOWS

Picnic at Idlewilde Park Friday Was Well Attended—Prominent Odd Fellows Were Present.

The second annual picnic and outing of the Odd Fellows of Newark and Licking county, was held at Idlewilde Park, Friday, under the auspices of Newark and Olive Branch Lodges of Odd Fellows, and was one of the most successful events of the kind ever held in the county, both in attendance and in its social features. Nearly the entire membership of the Newark lodges and their friends turned out, while nearly every lodge in the county was represented. The day was an ideal one. There was a fine program of sports and amusements and splendid music was furnished by the Odd Fellows band of Brownsville.

After dinner the assemblage was called to order and listened to addresses by Rev. Mr. Spaid, Grand Master George C. Rolf, Grand Secretary O. H Lyman, L. B Houck, representative of the 32d district and others, after which the program of events was taken up as published in yesterday's Advocate.

OUTING

Given By Newark Masonic Lodges at Buckeye Lake Park Was a Great Success.

The first annual outing of the Masonic lodges of Licking county, which was helf at Buckeye Lake on Thursday, was a decided success in every particular. Newark and Acme lodges and their friends turned out in full force, and all the various lodges of the county were well represented. The program of the day was carried out fully. Boating, fishing, dancing, etc., was enjoyed by all, as well as the free lemonade, which was liberally dispensed. The coming of the rain about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, interferred with the enjoyment of the occasion, and doubtless diminished the attendance, as many people intended going up at that hour to take supper and enjoy the evening. Everyone present was loud in praise of the arrangements that had been made by the committee in charge, and Manager W. D. Harris came in for a good share of the praise.

The crowd at the park was estimated at from twelve to fifteen hundred people, over nine hundred tickets having been sold from this point alone, while many were in attendance from the surrounding country

The committee of arrangements, representing Newark and Acme lodges, who had the affair in charge, consisted of Dr. George H. Woods, Messrs. J. L. Worth, W. H. Chilcote, C. M. Thompson, A. L. Rawlings and A. R. Pitser.

The House of Commons is losing its dignity. Black and White hears that members have been seen around the premises in shirt sleeves in warm weather. It expects to find a member with musical tastes entertaining friends at tea on the terrace by playing "Goodby, Dolly Gray," on a mouth organ. The Londoners have just heard of "Dolly Gray," and it is popular.

JUDGE KIBLER

SENDS GREETINGS TO FAMILY IN REUNION

From High Point In Colorado Mountains, Colonel Writes a Note to Montgomery Family.

At a reunion of the Montgomery family several years ago, Judge Chas. H. Kibler was made an honorary member, but owing to his trip to Colorado the judge was unable to attend this year's meeting. He, however, wrote the following letter to be read at the reunion, but this letter was not received by Mr. Griff Rosebrough in time to be read at the meeting:

"Glen Eyre, Larimer County, Colo., August 22, 1904.

Griff Rosebrough—As I can't be present at the annual reunion of the Montgomery family it has been suggested that I send to the meeting a little letter to show that I have not forgotten the day and the occasion.

"So that, at a point 8,400 feet above the level of the sea, among the mountains, with the snow visible from this valley upon the Medicine Bow ranges, I beg leave to greet you and congratulate you!

"Most of the family, so far as I know them, are farmers. It would be odd to them to have but ONE crop, the hay crop. That is all there is here, and that crop is what the ranchers here depend upon for a living. To get the grass, the valleys are cleared of the sage bushes, and then the water from the irrigation ditches is turned on the land, so cleared, early in the spring, and the ground is kept wet until a new grass appears. This is the grass for the hay-crop. It may be that the second year of the water bath is necessary to produce a good stand of the grass. Every year thereafter the water is turned and left on from early spring till the diddle of July, when it is then turned off, and the ground becomes dry enough for the cutting and curing of the grass.

This is a wild region, 40 miles from a railroad, 40 miles from a church, and nearly as far from a saloon. Sunday is not very much observed, but as a mercy there are no Sunday baseball games, and no vaudeville performances in a theater. So that there are some compensations as well as disadvantages.

"Praying for the good health, peace and prosperity of those present at the reunion, and of the whole family and connections, I am,

"Yours truly,

"CHARLES H. KIBLER."

WATER WORKS

ENGINEER L. E. CHAPIN IS HERE SECURNG DATA.

Will Soon Make a Report to the Water Company on the Value of the Newark System.

Mr. L. E. Chapin of the firm of Chapin & Knowles, civil and constructing engineers, with offices in Canton, O., and the Frick Building, Pittsburg, has been in Newark several times lately getting data about the old water works system. He was seen Friday by an Advocate reporter at the City Building and asked concerning his work here. Mr. Chapin is himself a resident of Canton, and is recognized as one of the most capable men in his line of work in the United States. He said:

"I have been employed by the stockholders of the water company to find out and tabulate the value of their property in Newark. They have not known themselves for a long time what the value of the system was, and it is to ascertain this that I am here.

"I have been busy making up tables and schedules, and will soon have them ready to incorporate in my report to the stockholders.

"I have not dug up the streets to any extent as yet, but may do so. I thought however, that if the city wished to know, in view of a possible purchase of the plant, what condition these mains are in, it would be time enough to dig up the streets after the city had received any proposition the stockholders might make, based on my report to them.

"I find the plant generally speaking, in good shape and will have little trouble in placing a value on that part examined by me."

Mr. Chapin is the man who rendered invaluable service to the city in outlining a policy and plans looking toward municipal ownership of water works, and it was he who furnished the plans and specifications for a new water works system under the direction of the City Council some three years ago.

HEARING

OF SHIELDS-BOLTON CASE IN 'SQUIRE KING'S COURT.

Room Was Crowded Friday With Interested Spectators, Who Listened to the Testimony.

The case of Ohio vs. Lewis Bolton, George Dille and Albert Rugg was called before 'Squire T. L. King on Friday morning. The court room was crowded with interested spectators.

This case arises on an affidavit filed by William J. Shields, Jr., in which he charges that several weeks ago Lewis Bolton, proprietor of the Bolton Hack and Transfer line, sent a cab to his home early in the morning, the driver saying that Bolton wanted to see him. When the cab stopped on West Main street between Fourth and Fifth streets, Shields alleges that while Dille held one arm and Rugg the other Bolton committed an assault and battery on him with intent to kill, striking him on the side of the head with a club. Shields testified to this and also that he broke loose and succeeded in getting away, pursued by Bolton.

Dr. F. E. Corkwell was one of the important witnesses of the morning. He said that Shields came into his office immediately after the alleged assault, and told him that Bolton had struck him with a club, indicating the place where he was hit. The doctor said he examined the place but could find no marks of any kind indicating an injury.

Rugg is a driver for Bolton, while Dille is a colored porter at the Hotel Warden. The three defendants are out on $100 bond each.

The prosecution is represented by Edward Kibler and Gil C. Daugherty, while Frank A. Bolton represents the defendants.
